ANSWER | PHIND INSTANT MODEL

Based on the provided text, I believe the Wikipedia article being referenced is about the Boyer–Moore string-search algorithm. Here are the key points that suggest this:

- 1. The text mentions "Boyer–Moore string-search algorithm" in the title and opening paragraph ³.
- 2. It describes the algorithm as "an efficient string-searching algorithm that is the standard benchmark for practical string-search literature" ³.
- 3. The article provides details about the algorithm's development by Robert S. Boyer and J. Strother Moore in 1977 ³.
- 4. It explains the key features of the algorithm, including matching on the tail of the pattern rather than the head, and skipping along the text in jumps of multiple characters ³.
- 5. The text includes a table showing an example of how the algorithm aligns the pattern and text for comparison ³.
- 6. It mentions implementations of the algorithm in various programming languages and tools like GNU's grep ³.

While the search results don't provide a direct match for the exact article title, the content strongly suggests that this Wikipedia page is about the Boyer–Moore string-search algorithm. The information provided aligns closely with what would be expected from such an article.
